Not surprisingly, the (i) _____ of the printing press (ii) _____ mass literacy, as books were no longer (iii) _____ exclusive to the clergy and aristocracy.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
prospect	subsidized	tokens
advent	engendered	windfalls
triumph	ameliorated	assets

Dickens's Uriah Heep, literature's exemplar of (i) _____, is doubtlessly not a unique figure either in fiction or in life. Who in real life has not seen (ii) _____, cringing, sycophantic headwaiters, public servants, and car salespeople? Surely, Dickens was our premiere caricaturist, able to capture specific and recognizable human (iii) _____ with broad strokes of his pen.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
civility	fawning	errors
subterfuge	supportive	foibles
obsequiousness	independent	tendencies

For some English speakers in the United States, the word “yam” is (i) _____ “sweet potato,” despite several differences between them. The yam is a starchy, white-fleshed tuber very low in beta carotene, characteristics not shared by its sweeter, more nutritious (ii) _____. One can trace the yam, the (iii)_____ version of the word “nyami,” back to West African origins, whereas sweet potatoes were first grown in Tropical America.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
analogous to	correlates	codified
commensurate with	simulacrum	anglicized
tantamount to	ersatz	integrated

To assert that the writing of a historical text draws on the same (i) _____ of techniques as the writing of a work of fiction may (ii) _____ those authors who feel that the two disciplines (iii)_____ very little.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
rubric	hinder	overlap
repertoire	abjure	cooperate
ratio	perturb	interfere

My mother would brook no argument about the use of vulgar (i) _____. As a result, I refined and sharpened my vocabulary until it became too (ii) _____ for my peers to (iii)_____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
vernacular	insolvent	goad
persuasion	abstruse	allocate
enticement	evanescent	penetrate

Bradypus variegatus, also known as the brown-throated three-toed sloth, is (i) _____ to humid, wooded-evergreen areas of Honduras to northern Argentina. Almost exclusively a/n (ii) _____ creature, the sloth is experiencing habitat destruction as many of Brazil's forests undergo the (iii)_____ process of clear-cutting.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
endemic	nocturnal	unsustainable
inherent	arboreal	regenerative
pandemic	anti-social	silvicultural

Very few veteran critics tend to be _____ the recent decade in cinema. Nonetheless, based on movie reviews many could easily come to the conclusion that the last ten years were indeed banner ones. Once the province of lettered intellectuals, a few even household names (Pauline Kael comes to mind), the role of the movie critic has been _____ by those lacking any notable credentials. With this flood of veritable tyros opining from the rafters, a movie's overall rating—as compiled and tabulated by popular Internet sites–often times confers a(n) _____ on a film, an assessment that posterity will most likely deem specious.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
enamored of	duly appropriated	aura of nostalgia
condemnatory to	amply filled	mantle of inviolability
unsympathetic	irredeemably disgraced	patina of respectability

Perhaps there is nothing more to the album than its case that experimentalism into uncharted sonic landscapes did not _____ with Stockhauen. Or perhaps its forays--many of which could rightly be dubbed sophomoric--into the avant-garde, also lead to the _____: that to create an unprecedented sound one has to _____ a discernible melody.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
come full circle	unsettling conclusion	choose to create
culminate	unwarranted hypothesis	forgo producing
die	uncharacteristic rebuttal	subtly embed

Monarchial reigns _____ tended to be more _____, dynastically speaking, than those royal courts in which palace machinations had not become a quotidian affair. In the latter, a pall of complacency would fall over the kingdom so that if suddenly there were an earl with an axe to grind, so to speak, his path to usurpation would be _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
marked by intrigue	imperiled	largely unobstructed
characterized by hubris	volatile	a treacherous one
weakened by attrition	robust	hardly assured

The subjectivity inherent in travel is aptly captured in the range of styles used by different writers. For Hemingway, writing eighty years ago, the experience of travel—regardless of how momentous—was rendered in _____ epiphanies, a style many of today's writers assiduously _____. Then there is travel writer Pico Iyer, for whom a simple stroll through an airport can engender sentences bursting forth with as many semicolons as revelations. Who thought the terminal could be so _____? Surely not Hemingway.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
prosaic	avoid	irrevocably wrenching
aphoristic	covet	wildly unpredictable
sardonic	mimic	endlessly fascinating

Perkin's wit, surprisingly _____ by the prudishness of his time, may not have been nearly as _____ had he lived in an era not so prone to _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
tempered	comical	blushing
overwhelmed	restrained	vacillation
untrammeled	racy	expression

Some note that the increase in the Native American powwow--an intertribal affair of song, dance, and storytelling, all intrinsic aspects of Native American culture--serves to (i) _____ the very culture it presumably aims to (ii) _____. They argue an overarching cultural narrative emerges, one that (iii)_____ the narrative of any one tribe.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
erode	foster	subsumes
distill	undermine	elaborates upon
empower	question	overcomes

Edgar Allen Poe biographers tend to fall into two camps: those who try to rescue the man himself from a macabre world in which fate had decreed nothing less than a(n) (i) _____ outcome, and those who (ii) _____ that very myth, treating the subject as one for whom a life of tragedy was (iii) _____ .

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
dire	dispute	all but inevitable
unforeseen	hold fast to	clearly unexpected
auspicious	squelch	hardly justified

Question 53 of 62

The Hellenistic and Judaic philosophy of the early centuries did not so much _____ ancient Greek philosophy as it did _____ the Platonic concepts of this time with its understanding of the way in which an ideal world, or one of perfect forms, _____ the existence of a perfect being. Even the philosophy of the Middle Ages was so inextricably bound with the ideas of ancient Greece that many philosophers could hardly imagine discussing the existence of a perfect being without invoking the conceptual framework laid down by Plato more than a thousand years earlier.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
adapt	supplant	allowed for
displace	reconcile	circumvented
foreshadow	corrupt	called into question

The question as to what constitutes art is hardly a _____ one. Today, artists exist whose main goal seems only to subvert work that no longer warrants the trite tag, “cutting-edge.” Once the proverbial envelope is pushed even further, the public inevitably scratches its collective head – or furrows the collective brow – thinking that this time the “artists” have _____. That very same admixture of contempt and confusion, however, was not unknown in Michelangelo’s day; only what was considered blasphemous, art-wise, in the 16th Century, would today be considered _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
perennial	served their purpose	hackneyed
contemporary	gone too far	reverent
controversial	failed to provoke	tame

Unlike her predecessor, Mayor Williams would not _____ any impertinence from her subordinates. Even a _____ comment she tended to construe as one full of _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
discountenance	seemingly innocuous	subterfuge
elicit	clearly tangential	prolixity
brook	somewhat ambivalent	contumely

That we may become flaccid after our rivals have been vanquished, and we are surrounded by those friendly to our interests, is in no way a(n) _____ observation. Still, history is rife with examples where a sense of _____ pervades once a people have achieved victory. Yet, even were this insight more _____, few would take notice, as human nature is wont to ignore future threats in times of prosperity.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
pithy	duty	widely circulated
trite	camaraderie	clearly unassailable
astounding	complacency	hastily dismissed

The professor's _____ demeanor not only made others reluctant to approach her, but also _____ the intellectual growth that comes from the _____ of ideas.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
cheerful	limited	repudiation
meek	invited	interchange
disdainful	facilitated	repression

The war became a _____ affair, and the citizenry, once _____ by grisly news reports, soon became _____even the most shocking frontline images.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
morbid	riled up	dismissive of
humdrum	absorbed	inured to
protracted	shaken	weary of

The Arizona sun is quick to pull the water from plants, leaving a (i) _____ shell of all but the heartiest of cacti. It is (ii) _____ to ignore the needs of the human body in this clime as well—dehydration can provoke (iii) _____, bellicosity, or even shock.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
hermetic	improvident	flippancy
fecund	delusional	petulance
desiccated	ineluctable	dissonance

The organization, whose mission is to (i) _____ equal access to education, (ii) _____ the government for scaling back spending on federal college spending initiatives, arguing that race and place will in large part continue to (iii) _____ who is and who is not able to attain higher education.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
caution against	sanctioned	desegregate
advocate for	cited	circumscribe
believe in	censured	mediate

James Clerk Maxwell once remarked that the best scientists are, in a sense, the _____ ones; not hemmed in by the _____ of their respective fields, they are able to approach problems with a(n) _____ mind, so to speak.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
adaptable	myopia	fertile
revolutionary	preconceptions	rational
ignorant	inertia	empty

Heinrich Feyermahn, in insisting that Galileo did not fully uphold the tenets of scientific rationalism, does not _____ the Italian astronomer, but rather the very edifice of Western thought. For if Galileo is the purported exemplar of rational thinking, and yet is _____, then the history of science cannot be understood as an endless succession of scientists carrying out their work free of all-too-human biases. Thus, Feyermahn admonishes, in faithfully chronicling the sweep of science in the last 300 years, historiographers would be _____ to not include the human foibles that were part of even the most ostensibly Apollonian endeavors.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
exclusively implicate	found wanting	prudent
partially repudiate	considered enlightened	remiss
fully espouse	dismissed as inconsequential	contrarian

The number of speeding tickets one receives is by no means a reliable measure of _____. Some _____ drivers, in fact, prove that in certain cases the inverse is true. That is those savvy enough to have availed themselves of the latest cellular phone applications receive up-to-the-minute information on the presence of highway patrolmen—greater excess speed, in these instances, simply implies a greater _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
awareness	affluent	degree of confidence
culpability	intrepid	sense of vulnerability
susceptibility	resourceful	likelihood of entrapment

For charities operating in the developing world, when noble impulses (i) _____ into mere (ii) _____, vapid slogans rear their heads and we witness a further deterioration in the very situation such high-mindedness had initially sought to (iii) _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
devolve	quixotry	limit
morph	fraud	prevent
coalesce	altruism	ameliorate

What tradition has long known, science must labor through its usual rigorous protocols to arrive at the very same assessment. Concerning learning in infants, recent findings (i) _____ this trend: the timeworn yarn that babies are (ii)_____ —and oftentimes disregarding—stimuli from their surroundings has been turned on its head; although (iii) _____ exhibiting a mastery of their respective worlds, infants are constantly conducting experiments—very much like scientists themselves—testing their limits vis-a-vis an environment at once enchanting and frustrating.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
buck	passively receiving	far from
uphold	subtly parsing	known for
underscore	actively misinterpreting	potentially

Countless generations have been divided on Mendelssohn's _____— should he inhabit the same pantheon as Bach and Haydn, or be _____ to the ranks of could-have-beens? After all, it can be argued that his _____ came at the age of 14 with his Octet in E-flat, a work, many believe, the composer never eclipsed in his remaining twenty-six years.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
technique	relegated	apogee
posterity	elevated	precocity
legacy	sublimated	nadir

Carefully couching his words in the most diplomatic language possible, so even those (i) _____ to his cause could hardly construe his words as a (ii) _____ , the city councilman offered an ultimatum to the (iii) _____ group of protesters camped outside the City Hall.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
indisposed to	panegyric	defeated
sympathetic	broadside	querulous
impartial to	prognostication	dishonest

Recent meteorological conditions in areas of the northeastern part of the country have been so _____as to leave scientists _____. Even those models scientists developed to _____ these extreme outliers have been found wanting.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
predictable	indifferent	accommodate
aberrant	dumbfounded	circumscribe
taxing	crestfallen	discount

Not surprisingly, the (i) _____ of the printing press (ii) _____ mass literacy, as books were no longer (iii) _____ exclusive to the clergy and aristocracy.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
prospect	subsidized	tokens
advent	engendered	windfalls
triumph	ameliorated	assets

Difficulty
Very Hard

Dickens's Uriah Heep, literature's exemplar of (i) _____, is doubtlessly not a unique figure either in fiction or in life. Who in real life has not seen (ii) _____, cringing, sycophantic headwaiters, public servants, and car salespeople? Surely, Dickens was our premiere caricaturist, able to capture specific and recognizable human (iii) _____ with broad strokes of his pen.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
civility	fawning	errors
subterfuge	supportive	foibles
obsequiousness	independent	tendencies

Difficulty
Very Hard

For some English speakers in the United States, the word “yam” is (i) _____ “sweet potato,” despite several differences between them. The yam is a starchy, white-fleshed tuber very low in beta carotene, characteristics not shared by its sweeter, more nutritious (ii) _____. One can trace the yam, the (iii)_____ version of the word “nyami,” back to West African origins, whereas sweet potatoes were first grown in Tropical America.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
analogous to	correlates	codified
commensurate with	simulacrum	anglicized
tantamount to	ersatz	integrated

Back to Results

Question 3 of 62

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

To assert that the writing of a historical text draws on the same (i) _____ of techniques as the writing of a work of fiction may (ii) _____ those authors who feel that the two disciplines (iii)_____ very little.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
rubric	hinder	overlap
repertoire	abjure	cooperate
ratio	perturb	interfere

Back to Results

Question 4 of 62

Previous Next

Difficulty
Hard

My mother would brook no argument about the use of vulgar (i) _____. As a result, I refined and sharpened my vocabulary until it became too (ii) _____ for my peers to (iii)_____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
vernacular	insolvent	goad
persuasion	abstruse	allocate
enticement	evanescent	penetrate

Back to Results

Question 62 of 62

Difficulty
Hard

Bradypus variegatus, also known as the brown-throated three-toed sloth, is (i) _____ to humid, wooded-evergreen areas of Honduras to northern Argentina. Almost exclusively a/n (ii) _____ creature, the sloth is experiencing habitat destruction as many of Brazil's forests undergo the (iii)_____ process of clear-cutting.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
endemic	nocturnal	unsustainable
inherent	arboreal	regenerative
pandemic	anti-social	silvicultural

Difficulty
Hard

Very few veteran critics tend to be _____ the recent decade in cinema. Nonetheless, based on movie reviews many could easily come to the conclusion that the last ten years were indeed banner ones. Once the province of lettered intellectuals, a few even household names (Pauline Kael comes to mind), the role of the movie critic has been _____ by those lacking any notable credentials. With this flood of veritable tyros opining from the rafters, a movie's overall rating—as compiled and tabulated by popular Internet sites–often times confers a(n) _____ on a film, an assessment that posterity will most likely deem specious.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
enamored of	duly appropriated	aura of nostalgia
condemnatory to	amply filled	mantle of inviolability
unsympathetic	irredeemably disgraced	patina of respectability

Back to Results

Question 60 of 62

Previous Next

Title	Your Result	Difficulty	Your Pace	Others' Pace
		Very Hard

Perhaps there is nothing more to the album than its case that experimentalism into uncharted sonic landscapes did not _____ with Stockhauen. Or perhaps its forays--many of which could rightly be dubbed sophomoric--into the avant-garde, also lead to the _____: that to create an unprecedented sound one has to _____ a discernible melody.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
come full circle	unsettling conclusion	choose to create
culminate	unwarranted hypothesis	forgo producing
die	uncharacteristic rebuttal	subtly embed

Back to Results

Question 58 of 62

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

Monarchial reigns _____ tended to be more _____, dynastically speaking, than those royal courts in which palace machinations had not become a quotidian affair. In the latter, a pall of complacency would fall over the kingdom so that if suddenly there were an earl with an axe to grind, so to speak, his path to usurpation would be _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
marked by intrigue	imperiled	largely unobstructed
characterized by hubris	volatile	a treacherous one
weakened by attrition	robust	hardly assured

Difficulty
Very Hard

The subjectivity inherent in travel is aptly captured in the range of styles used by different writers. For Hemingway, writing eighty years ago, the experience of travel—regardless of how momentous—was rendered in _____ epiphanies, a style many of today's writers assiduously _____. Then there is travel writer Pico Iyer, for whom a simple stroll through an airport can engender sentences bursting forth with as many semicolons as revelations. Who thought the terminal could be so _____? Surely not Hemingway.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
prosaic	avoid	irrevocably wrenching
aphoristic	covet	wildly unpredictable
sardonic	mimic	endlessly fascinating

Difficulty
Very Hard

Perkin's wit, surprisingly _____ by the prudishness of his time, may not have been nearly as _____ had he lived in an era not so prone to _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
tempered	comical	blushing
overwhelmed	restrained	vacillation
untrammeled	racy	expression

Back to Results

Question 55 of 62

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

Some note that the increase in the Native American powwow--an intertribal affair of song, dance, and storytelling, all intrinsic aspects of Native American culture--serves to (i) _____ the very culture it presumably aims to (ii) _____. They argue an overarching cultural narrative emerges, one that (iii)_____ the narrative of any one tribe.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
erode	foster	subsumes
distill	undermine	elaborates upon
empower	question	overcomes

Difficulty
Hard

Edgar Allen Poe biographers tend to fall into two camps: those who try to rescue the man himself from a macabre world in which fate had decreed nothing less than a(n) (i) _____ outcome, and those who (ii) _____ that very myth, treating the subject as one for whom a life of tragedy was (iii) _____ .

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
dire	dispute	all but inevitable
unforeseen	hold fast to	clearly unexpected
auspicious	squelch	hardly justified

Back to Results

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

The Hellenistic and Judaic philosophy of the early centuries did not so much _____ ancient Greek philosophy as it did _____ the Platonic concepts of this time with its understanding of the way in which an ideal world, or one of perfect forms, _____ the existence of a perfect being. Even the philosophy of the Middle Ages was so inextricably bound with the ideas of ancient Greece that many philosophers could hardly imagine discussing the existence of a perfect being without invoking the conceptual framework laid down by Plato more than a thousand years earlier.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
adapt	supplant	allowed for
displace	reconcile	circumvented
foreshadow	corrupt	called into question

Back to Results

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

The question as to what constitutes art is hardly a _____ one. Today, artists exist whose main goal seems only to subvert work that no longer warrants the trite tag, “cutting-edge.” Once the proverbial envelope is pushed even further, the public inevitably scratches its collective head – or furrows the collective brow – thinking that this time the “artists” have _____. That very same admixture of contempt and confusion, however, was not unknown in Michelangelo’s day; only what was considered blasphemous, art-wise, in the 16th Century, would today be considered _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
perennial	served their purpose	hackneyed
contemporary	gone too far	reverent
controversial	failed to provoke	tame

Difficulty
Very Hard

Unlike her predecessor, Mayor Williams would not _____ any impertinence from her subordinates. Even a _____ comment she tended to construe as one full of _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
discountenance	seemingly innocuous	subterfuge
elicit	clearly tangential	prolixity
brook	somewhat ambivalent	contumely

Difficulty
Very Hard

That we may become flaccid after our rivals have been vanquished, and we are surrounded by those friendly to our interests, is in no way a(n) _____ observation. Still, history is rife with examples where a sense of _____ pervades once a people have achieved victory. Yet, even were this insight more _____, few would take notice, as human nature is wont to ignore future threats in times of prosperity.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
pithy	duty	widely circulated
trite	camaraderie	clearly unassailable
astounding	complacency	hastily dismissed

Difficulty
Very Hard

The professor's _____ demeanor not only made others reluctant to approach her, but also _____ the intellectual growth that comes from the _____ of ideas.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
cheerful	limited	repudiation
meek	invited	interchange
disdainful	facilitated	repression

Back to Results

Previous Next

Difficulty
Easy

The war became a _____ affair, and the citizenry, once _____ by grisly news reports, soon became _____even the most shocking frontline images.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
morbid	riled up	dismissive of
humdrum	absorbed	inured to
protracted	shaken	weary of

Back to Results

Question 47 of 62

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

The Arizona sun is quick to pull the water from plants, leaving a (i) _____ shell of all but the heartiest of cacti. It is (ii) _____ to ignore the needs of the human body in this clime as well—dehydration can provoke (iii) _____, bellicosity, or even shock.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
hermetic	improvident	flippancy
fecund	delusional	petulance
desiccated	ineluctable	dissonance

Difficulty
Very Hard

The organization, whose mission is to (i) _____ equal access to education, (ii) _____ the government for scaling back spending on federal college spending initiatives, arguing that race and place will in large part continue to (iii) _____ who is and who is not able to attain higher education.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
caution against	sanctioned	desegregate
advocate for	cited	circumscribe
believe in	censured	mediate

Difficulty
Very Hard

James Clerk Maxwell once remarked that the best scientists are, in a sense, the _____ ones; not hemmed in by the _____ of their respective fields, they are able to approach problems with a(n) _____ mind, so to speak.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
adaptable	myopia	fertile
revolutionary	preconceptions	rational
ignorant	inertia	empty

Difficulty
Very Hard

Heinrich Feyermahn, in insisting that Galileo did not fully uphold the tenets of scientific rationalism, does not _____ the Italian astronomer, but rather the very edifice of Western thought. For if Galileo is the purported exemplar of rational thinking, and yet is _____, then the history of science cannot be understood as an endless succession of scientists carrying out their work free of all-too-human biases. Thus, Feyermahn admonishes, in faithfully chronicling the sweep of science in the last 300 years, historiographers would be _____ to not include the human foibles that were part of even the most ostensibly Apollonian endeavors.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
exclusively implicate	found wanting	prudent
partially repudiate	considered enlightened	remiss
fully espouse	dismissed as inconsequential	contrarian

Difficulty

Very Hard

The number of speeding tickets one receives is by no means a reliable measure of _____. Some _____ drivers, in fact, prove that in certain cases the inverse is true. That is those savvy enough to have availed themselves of the latest cellular phone applications receive up-to-the-minute information on the presence of highway patrolmen—greater excess speed, in these instances, simply implies a greater _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
awareness	affluent	degree of confidence
culpability	intrepid	sense of vulnerability
susceptibility	resourceful	likelihood of entrapment

Back to Results

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

For charities operating in the developing world, when noble impulses (i) _____ into mere (ii) _____, vapid slogans rear their heads and we witness a further deterioration in the very situation such high-mindedness had initially sought to (iii) _____.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
devolve	quixotry	limit
morph	fraud	prevent
coalesce	altruism	ameliorate

Difficulty
Very Hard

What tradition has long known, science must labor through its usual rigorous protocols to arrive at the very same assessment. Concerning learning in infants, recent findings (i) _____ this trend: the timeworn yarn that babies are (ii)_____ —and oftentimes disregarding—stimuli from their surroundings has been turned on its head; although (iii) _____ exhibiting a mastery of their respective worlds, infants are constantly conducting experiments—very much like scientists themselves—testing their limits vis-a-vis an environment at once enchanting and frustrating.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
buck	passively receiving	far from
uphold	subtly parsing	known for
underscore	actively misinterpreting	potentially

Back to Results

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

Countless generations have been divided on Mendelssohn's _____— should he inhabit the same pantheon as Bach and Haydn, or be _____ to the ranks of could-have-beens? After all, it can be argued that his _____ came at the age of 14 with his Octet in E-flat, a work, many believe, the composer never eclipsed in his remaining twenty-six years.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
technique	relegated	apogee
posterity	elevated	precocity
legacy	sublimated	nadir

Difficulty
Hard

Carefully couching his words in the most diplomatic language possible, so even those (i) _____ to his cause could hardly construe his words as a (ii) _____ , the city councilman offered an ultimatum to the (iii) _____ group of protesters camped outside the City Hall.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
indisposed to	panegyric	defeated
sympathetic	broadside	querulous
impartial to	prognostication	dishonest

Back to Results

Question 38 of 62

Previous Next

Difficulty
Very Hard

Recent meteorological conditions in areas of the northeastern part of the country have been so _____as to leave scientists _____. Even those models scientists developed to _____ these extreme outliers have been found wanting.

Blank (i)	Blank (ii)	Blank (iii)
predictable	indifferent	accommodate
aberrant	dumbfounded	circumscribe
taxing	crestfallen	discount

Difficulty
Hard